On Thursday evening, Jesus has a Last Supper with his disciples. He tells them that he is going to die, but that he will rise again on the third day. After the supper, Jesus goes to the Garden of Gethsemane to pray. He is very sad, and he asks his disciples to pray with him. But they fall asleep.

Judas Iscariot, one of Jesus' disciples, has betrayed him. He leads a group of soldiers to the garden and they arrest Jesus. Jesus is taken to the high priest, who questions him and then sends him to Pilate, the Roman governor. Pilate finds Jesus innocent, but the people demand that he be crucified. Pilate gives in to the crowd's demands, and Jesus is crucified on a cross.

Jesus dies on the cross, but on the third day, he rises again. He appears to his disciples and tells them that he has conquered death. The disciples are overjoyed, and they go out and tell the world the good news of Jesus' resurrection.
